Treasury Releases Additional Details on the “Made in America Plan”

Key Point:

- The Treasury Department has released further details surrounding their Made in America Tax Plan, which includes a number of key tax increases.

The Biden Administration Treasury Department has released a more in-depth “Made in America Tax Plan” which builds upon the policies outlined in the Biden Infrastructure Plan. This also includes the proposed “pay fors” detailed by the Biden Administration, as to how they will pay for much of the infrastructure plan. According to the Treasury Department, the report “describes President Biden's Made in America tax plan, part of the newly announced American Jobs Plan, the goal of which is to make American companies and workers more competitive by eliminating incentives to offshore investment, substantially reducing profit shifting, countering tax competition on corporate rates, and providing tax preferences for clean energy production.” The report, which can be found here, outlines a number of main policy proposals included in the broader plan, including:

- Raising the corporate tax rate to 28%.
- Strengthening the global minimum tax regime for U.S. based multinational corporations.
- Encouraging global adoption of the global minimum tax in order to target low corporate tax rate countries.
- Enacting a 15% minimum tax on book income.
- Replacing fossil fuel incentives with clean energy production incentives.
- Ramping up enforcement efforts to address tax avoidance.
- Eliminating the BEAT and replace it with the “SHIELD” (Stopping Harmful Inversions and Ending Low-tax Developments), which the plan indicates “denies multinational corporations U.S. tax deductions by reference to payments made to related parties that are subject to a low effective rate of tax.”

There has also been additional discussion in the Biden Administration around raising the GILTI rate to 21%. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen has written an Op-Ed on the issue and potential reforms which can be found here.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Wyden (D-OR), and Senators Brown (D-OH), and Warner (D-VA) Release a Plan to Overhaul the U.S. International Tax Framework

Key Point:
- Key Senate Finance Committee Democrats have released a white paper detailing a plan to overhaul U.S. international tax provisions.

Earlier this week, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Wyden (D-OR), along with Senators Brown (D-OH) and Warner (D-VA), released a plan to overhaul the U.S. international tax framework. This framework offers additional options for changes to GILTI, FDII and BEAT, and may fill in some of the substance as to the possible methods behind changes implicated in the Biden plan or that Congress may undertake with respect to infrastructure offsets. Major provisions of not in the plan include:

- Repealing the 10% return on assets exemption from GILTI for “qualified business asset investment” (QBAI).
- Increase GILTI rate to some higher rate, suggested potentially between 60% - 100% of the corporate rate.
- Apply GILTI on a country-by-country basis.
- Eliminate penalties under GILTI (allocating certain domestic expenses to foreign income, reducing foreign tax credits) for research and management that occur in the US.
- Repeal QBAI in the context of FDII.
- Equalize tax rates on GILTI and FDII at whatever rates are set for both, if FDII is maintained.
- Allow full value for domestic business tax credits under BEAT.
- Apply a higher BEAT tax rate targeted at base erosion payments, above the current 10% rate for regular taxable income.

While it is important to note a number of these provisions align with proposals from the Biden Administration Treasury Department, a number of provisions provide greater detail on specific taxes and may provide a roadmap for future Congressional action on the issue. There are differences as well, such as different approaches on a BEAT repeal or replacement. This release is open to public comment.
until April 23 and all public comments must be submitted to the Senate Finance Committee at InternationalTax@finance.senate.gov by that date.

FINANCIAL SERVICES

Vice Chairman Quarles Discusses FSB Agenda

Key Points:
- Vice Chairman Quarles announced that the FSB will be releasing a report in July laying out proposals to enhance money market fund resilience.
- Quarles also discussed the FSB’s work to enhance CCP resilience and resolvability.

On March 30, Federal Reserve Vice Chairman for Supervision and Financial Stability Board (FSB) Chairman Randal Quarles gave a speech entitled “The FSB in 2021: Addressing Financial Stability Challenges in an Age of Interconnectedness, Innovation, and Change.” The speech focused on the FSB’s work on two issues: non-bank financial intermediation (NBFI) and cross-border payments.

Quarles noted that an FSB working group released a report on the March 2020 stress in the financial sector entitled “Holistic Review of the March Market Turmoil.” He said the Holistic Review highlighted vulnerabilities in the financial system, in particular “the dependence of the system on readily available liquidity, and vulnerabilities if liquidity strains emerge—in money market mutual funds (MMFs) and open-end funds, through margin calls and in core bond markets.” He noted that the FSB will release a report for consultation in July laying out policy proposals for improving MMF resilience. He added:

> As a first step, the focus will be on enhancing our understanding of vulnerabilities that could emanate from these sectors, including risk transmission channels. Addressing systemic risk in a dynamic sector that continues to evolve is no small feat. I expect policy-related discussions and recommendations to follow the analytical work, though that will likely extend past this year.

Quarles added that FSB will also be focused on measures to enhance central counterparty (CCP) resilience and resolvability. He stated:

> I am coordinating with the Chairs of the Committee on Payments and Market Infrastructures (CPMI), International Organization of Securities Commissions, and the FSB Resolution Steering Group on shaping these details. We expect to launch a workstream this year aimed at further strengthening the... resilience and resolvability of CCPs in default and non-default loss scenarios, including assessing whether any new types of resources would be necessary to enhance CCP resolvability.

CMS Rescinds Medicaid Work Requirements

Key Points:

- The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) sent letters to Michigan and Wisconsin rescinding approval of Section 1115 waivers to permit work requirements in Medicaid.
- CMS had already rescinded similar authority for Arkansas and New Hampshire. Seven other states are still awaiting a decision.

On April 6, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) sent letters to Medicaid directors in Michigan and Wisconsin to rescind approval for Section 1115 demonstrations imposing work requirements on Medicaid beneficiaries. CMS had already rescinded approval for similar programs in Arkansas and New Hampshire.

The use of Medicaid work requirements was strongly supported by the Trump Administration which granted permission to 12 states to enact demonstration programs. Former CMS Administrator Seema Verma contended “it is not compassionate to trap people in government programs or create greater dependency on public assistance…”

In its letters, CMS said the work requirements were not consistent with the purpose of the Medicaid program and emphasized most Medicaid beneficiaries already work. In the letter to Michigan, for example, CMS noted in the state’s study, most beneficiaries who were targeted with the community engagement requirement already met the requirement or were exempt due to disability or illness. Therefore, the program did not really increase community engagement.
Upcoming Hearings and Meetings

April 14
COVID-19: The Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee will hold a hearing on “Preparedness for COVID-19: The Initial Pandemic Response and Lessons Learned.”

Biden Administration Sends out Proposal for Reforming the Global Tax System on “Digital Taxes”

Key Points:
- The Biden Administration sent a proposal to countries involved in ongoing digital tax discussions at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), which would subject all international companies with annual global revenues of around $20 billion to a corporate tax.
- The Biden Administration, as well as the Trump Administration, considered imposing Section 301 duties to retaliate against discriminatory digital taxes by other countries or trading blocks (EU).

The Biden Administration sent a proposal to countries involved in ongoing digital tax discussions at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) that would subject all international companies with annual global revenues of around $20 billion to a corporate tax wherever they sell their goods or services. The proposal would target companies’ global profits and divide the taxes between countries depending on where the companies sell their goods. This proposal would limit the tax to nearly 100 of the largest companies in the world and would eliminate the distinction between automated digital services and consumer-facing businesses. This new approach would replace the existing global regime of taxing companies only in the countries where they book their profits.

U.S., U.K. Continue to Hold Negotiations on Airbus-Boeing Dispute

Key Point:
- Negotiations between the U.S. and United Kingdom (U.K.) related to the Airbus-Boeing dispute continue, with the U.K. hoping that a resolution will lead to a larger free trade agreement.

The U.S. and United Kingdom (U.K.) continue to hold virtual negotiations regarding the Airbus-Boeing dispute. The U.K. had asked the European Union (EU) if they wanted to participate in trilateral discussions, but the EU refused, declaring that the dispute is a bilateral issue with the U.S. U.K. officials hope that resolving the dispute will help lead the way to a larger free trade agreement with the U.S. Despite these hopes, the 90-day deadline for Congress to fast track a bilateral trade agreement using Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) was April 1, suggesting any trade deal with the U.K. will be on a slow approach.

President Biden Orders Cabinet to Review Buy America Policies

Key Point:
- President Biden has requested that his Cabinet secretaries review their departments’ Buy America policies, indicating that the Biden Administration will keep Buy America policy issues at the forefront.

Last week, President Biden directed his Cabinet secretaries to review their departments’ Buy America policies to ensure they are in line with his executive order to expand domestic government procurement. The January executive order states that the government “should, whenever possible, procure goods, products, materials, and services from sources that will help American businesses compete in strategic industries and help America’s workers thrive.” President Biden requested that his Cabinet secretaries report back to him at the next cabinet meeting. The action suggests that the Biden Administration will keep the Buy America policy issues at the forefront, and that the executive order in January was not just posturing.
